Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

HOWARD REED, opening his campaign for governor at Pine Bluff Saturday night, was specific in his criticism of the Futrell administration—but where it touched upon his own formula for meeting the problems confronting the state his speech was evasive and full of generalities.

Reed Hits Sales Tax for Schools, Opening Campaign

Declares He Would Help Teachers—But Opposes Hike in Taxes

HITS REVENUE DEPT.

Candidate Says Futrell Has Used It to Build Up Political Machine

PINE BLUF, Ark.—Two years and a day after J. M. Futrell opened a successful campaign for governor of Arkansas here, Howard Reed of Cleburne county, from the same platform Saturday night opened his campaign for the same office, opposing Governor Futrell, in an address in which he promised a constructive administration if elected.

Mr. Reed attacked the Revenue Department, opposed a sales tax, outlined a solution to the bonded debt problem of the state, asked for a nelective head of the highway and railroad departments and spoke strongly for repea lof the poll tax law.

No Criticism of Futrell

In opening his address, Reed said that he had no criticism of the present governor of a personal nature, and in closing declared that "the governor has been surrounded with false friends in his time of need when his true who would have advised him wisely were unable to approach him."

Departing somewhat from his prepared address he touched on the situation at the Monticello A. and M. College. "The condtion there is important," he told his hearers, "and the welfare of the school should be placed above the welfare of any individual or group of individuals."

If he had been governor, he said, he would have gone there when the charges first developed and heard all evidence and made his decision on the merits of the case as the governor should do. "If I am elected," he promised, "You will be able to get a "yes" or "no" answer to any question that arises.

For Registration of Voters

"I believe the constitution should be changed," Mr. Reed said, "the poll tax law repealed and provision made for registration of voters under proper regulation, thereby guaranteeing to every citizen the right to vote without paying for the privilege, or compromising his citizenship to any politician. This would be a death blow to machine politics, both county and state."

Horse racing Mr. Reed would leave to the people, as reflected by their representatives in the legislature, and if such a bill is passed, he promised to sign it, "but if not, horse racing will not be permitted nor winked at."

Referring to toll bridges as unfair, Mr. Reed said that if elected governor he hoped "to find some way to abate these nuisances."

Highway Bond Refunding

Reviewing the highway bond refunding problem, the speaker declared:

"As I see the situation, the solution of our problem will not come from refunding, but in the payment of our honest debts. The plan I have in mind will not destroy the bill that has been passed by the governor, because I propose to follow the principle if the avenue is still open, as laid down by Senator Norfleet's bill which was vetoed by the governor. I would go to the United States government and borrow money, buy these bonds on the market, which even with the present refunding bill are quoted at 60 cents on the dolarl and less, irrespective of which class or non-refunding—thereby shaving the principal of that $155,000,000 that is now outstanding."

Comptroller's Office

Mr. Reed compared the present operation of the comptroller's office with his own record as comptroller, and concluded that "many employes should be discharged and the expense should not exceed the amount appropriated at the time I was there.

"Irregularities developed should be prosecuted by the courts and not by the department, as it should be strictly a fact-finding organization. The good name of no official should be assassinated upon half-baked conclusions nor half-told truths, nor by reason of political differences."

The candidate attacked the administration of the relief organizations, saying:

"It is generally charged throughout the state that the FERA and the RFC are festered with politics from the governor's office down to the humble workman. Foods have been permitted

Reed blasted Futrell for setting up in the revenue department "the greatest political machine ever created in the state"—but when he tackles the school problem the governor's opponent is reduced to this unhappy statement:

> I shall support the Arkansas schools from kindergarten to University in any equitable movement for their relief, except a sales tax and a direct tax upon property.

The people of Arkansas aren't going to have much patience with a candidate who weeps on the necks of $40-a-month school teachers, but who declares, in effect, there is nothing he can do for them.

The difference between Candidate Reed and this newspaper is:

Reed says "no" to both a property tax increase and a new sales tax.

This newspaper recognizes that an increase in the property tax is impossible, and therefore a sales tax is the only way out.

This newspaper stands for a sales tax to help the schools, until some other better measure is suggested.

Reed damns the sales tax—but offers no alternative.

He weeps for the school teachers, but he doesn't propose to work for them.

Our prophecy that the United States Senate's investigation of the Long and Overton elections in Louisiana would come to naught, turned out to be true when the senate dismissed all charges Saturday night.

It has been our contention ever since this investigation was launched two years ago that the democratic processes of government in this republic of ours would be well served if the federal government would throw Louisiana's dirty linen back to her to be washed at home.

This is an old story—and there's only one happy ending.

It's the same story you read when the senate investigated the election of Smith in Illinois, and Vare in Pennsylvania. The barring of Senator-Elect Smith didn't stop Utility Baron Insull from continuing to subsidy elections, nor did it save the people of Illinois and the United States from being fleeced by Insull's heavily watered utility stock-selling schemes. The barring of Senator-Elect Vare didn't purify the politics of Pennsylvania.

It is the same story you read when well-meaning reformers sought to have Franklin D. Roosevelt, the then governor of New York, remove James J. Walker as mayor of New York City. Governor Roosevelt was spared the unhappy duty of having to make a decision in that instance by the discreet resignation of Mayor Walker.

X X X

No thinking person can possibly approve of the immoral theory that the local electorate shall escape responsibility for their duly chosen officials by having their elections reviewed by a superior government—no matter whether it is the governor passing on the fitness of a mayor, or the United States Senate reviewing elections in Illinois, Pennsylvania or Louisiana.

As freeman we elect our officials and as freeman we are responsible for the character of the man we have endorsed.

We are just as much responsible for them as we are for the conduct of our personal lives or our personal finance.

To permit a superior government to lift that responsibility from us is as immoral as for a man to let his whole life run haphazardly, and then in a critical hour invoke the help of Heaven—when Heaven alone knows he never for one moment has done anything to merit Divine intervention.

To invoke the help of a superior government is an act of slavery, a

Adjournment Issue Pressed in Vain

Struggle Resumed After Huey Long Forces a Recess

Congress Reconvenes Monday After Fiasco of Week-End

BLOCKED BY LONG

Lawmakers Anxious to Go Home Are Held Over From Saturday Night

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Democratic pressure for adjournment of congress by nightfall made headway as the session wore on Monday.

The senate voted 41 to 39 to take up the 2-billion-dollar general relief appropriation bill as agreed by conferees from the two houses.

LaFollette had asked instead priority for his bill to establish the mediation rail labor board.

Representatives Brynes introduced an adjournment motion, but with no time element mentioned.

Goes Over Week-End

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Congress moved to the edge of adjournment Saturday night but met demands of enactments of so much additional legislation that a recess was taken to Monday.

With all the key pieces of legislation that the administration had instisted upon out of the way, senators pressed demand for action of a farm mortgage moratorium bill and railroad labor or so hard that Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, gave up hope of finishing Saturday night.

Fourteen and a half hours of work had been done by the senate and 13 1-2 by the house when the bells announced the recess. Deficiency appropriation, labor arbitration and other major measures sought by President Roosevelt had been all disposed of. But a few finishing touches remained.

Senator Long of Louisiana was one of those who pressed the farm mortgage issue. Half a dozen other senators made demands for other measures.

Robinson Loses Patience

Robinson finally reprimanded his colleagues for the obstructive tactics and said it was "impossible to conduct public business under conditions such as those that have arisen tonight."

His move to recess came without warning and in the midst of efforts to get up a bill to set up new machinery for settling railway labor disputes, an omnibus bank measure, and a bill to assist farmers to regain their foreclosed properties under a virtual six-year moratorium on their obligations.

Much Work Completed

Work has been completed on the loans to industry bill, on the labor dispute arbitration measure, the housing program was in conference between house and senate and the deficiency appropriation bill lacked only senate approval of a conference report of it to send to the White House.

The President sent a letter to Speaker Rainey praising the work of the 73rd congress. It follows:

"My dear Mr. Speaker:

"Before the final adjournment of the House of Representatives of the 73rd Congress, I want to send through you, to the members thereof, my sincere compliments and good wishes.

"This Congress will go down in history as one of the large accomplishments for national good. May I add to this my own feeling of deep satisfaction in the fine spirit of co-operation which has existed between the legislative and executive branches of the government.

"May you all have and enjoy a well earned holiday."

The house had been ready to quit anytime the senate could get an adjournment. At the center of the senate row stood Huey Long, loudly demanding that a bill to give bankrupt farmers a six-year moratorium be enacted. He threatened to block all legislation until it was done.

Dill of Washington and Neely of West Virginia and Couzens of Michigan called for passage of a bill covering pensions to railway employes, and Hastings of Delaware threatend a filibuster if this should be brought up.

Bulkey of Ohio tried to obtain passage of an omnibus measure making changes in all the banking laws.

This stirred the hottest dispute of all.

Von Papen Hints Kaiser to Return

Hitler's Right-Hand Man Surprisingly Denounces His Leader

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—The boldest public criticism of the Nazi regime which has come from anyone in high authority since Chancelor Hitler assumed power, was made by Franz von Papen, vice-chancellor, recently, it was revealed Monday.

No papers published von Papen's guarded plea for re-etsablishment of the monarchy.

Von Papen challenged the Nazi regime's claim that it must impose its will in the realy of religion, and severely criticized the muzzling of the press.

Von Papen, right-hand man to Hitler, took issue with the nation-wide campaign of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, against "the grousers and croakers."

He criticized the attempt to have one political party rule the country instead of making the new Germany "the real people's state."

Southern Storm Takes Six Lives

Louisiana and Mississippi Raked by Hurricane Over Week-End

NEW ORLEANS.— (AP) —The death list from Saturday's tropical hurricane in Louisiana and Mississippi mounted to six persons Sunday as reports reached here from communities isolated by the fierce blow which swept a wide road of property and crop damage through the two states.

Four white persons lost their lives in Louisiana. Two unidentified negroes were killed in the Gatesville community near the Crystal Springs (Miss.) tomato growing sections when they were struck by flying timber. Injuries were numerous in the two states.

The most pitiful tragedy reported from the hurricane disaster was the sweeping to death of two children from a raft which was destroyed on Oyster Bayou near Berwick, La. Roosevelt Duplantis, 2, and his one-year-old sister lost their lives. They were the children of John and Ida Duplantis. The family was on a shrimping platform when the hurricane struck. The mother and father pulled down sides of sheds and attempted to float to shore in the high water.

Their raft was demolished and the children were washed away. Mr. and Mrs. Duplantis grasped a raft to which Forrest Keiff and his grandchild were clinging and the party drifted 10 miles to Bayou Carencro where they reached shore and were cared for by trappers.

Reports from Bunkie, La., told of the death of Wilbert Butler, 52, by a 2,100-volt electric power line that had been blown down by the hurricane. His body was found entwined in the wire and his right arm was burned off.

Charles Prince, 55, of Loreauville, La., was killed by an automobile on a highway in Ibera parish while he was running to shelter down the road as the storm was striking through there at full force.

Dozens of river and lake craft were sunk or demolished and Morgan City, Baton Rouge and other Louisiana cities and towns in the path of the disturbance were littered with debris.

Louisiana State University experts estimated that several million dollars worth of crop damage had been done in the corn, cotton and sugar regions of the state. New Orleans was beyond the storm center.

A family reunion was held Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Stroud. Twenty-one members of the immediate family were present.

Tribunal Tax Held to Earnings Only, by Supreme Court

Does Not Apply to Gross Receipts, Says Arkansas' Highest Bench

TOTAL TAX $32,000

Collections to Date Have Been Made on the Earnings Basis

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— The Arkansas Supreme Court Monday held that the tax for the support of the Fact Finding Tribunal could be levied only on gross earnings, as distinguished from gross receipts, of public utility companies.

Chief Justice Johnson, joined by Associate Justices Mehaffey and Humphries, dissented in a vigorous opinion in which they asserted that the majority had "nullified and destroyed the effectiveness of the tribunal."

The opinion was given in a case in which Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman sought to collect from the Fort Smith Gas company a tax of $2 per thousand on gross receipts of $407,584.83.

The company contneded that Act 72 of 1933 creating the tribunal contemplated that the tax should be collected against gross earnings, which in this case were $214,000.00.

The company appealed the case from the Sebastian county circuit court.

The tribunal during the fiscal year has collected approximately $32,000 from public utilities on the basis of gross earnings.

Son of Gulf Co. Head Is Visitor

J. D. Meyer and W. G. Succop, Yale Juniors, Guests at Hope Luncheon

John Davidson Meyer, son of H. C. Meyer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who is vice-president and general manager of Gulf Refining company, and William Gilbert Succop, also of Pittsburgh, were luncheon guests of the local district Gulf office at Hotel Barlow Monday.

Both Meyer and Succop are juniors at Yale university. They drove in from Hot Springs Monday noon on their way to Dallas and New Orleans, returning home by way of Georgia and Florida on a tour of Gulf properties.

Joshed about southern heat in June, both young men replied: "Yes, but after we get through our last two years of school we want to get a job down South."

They were entertained by W. A. Forbes, district supervisor, and Martin S. Bates, district distributor of the Hope Gulf office. Present as a guest because he too hailed from Pennsylvania, was A. H. Washburn, publisher of The Star—but Wilkes-Barre and Pittsburgh being about as close as Fort Smith and Memphis, they talked about the South.

Mr. Bates and Mr. Forbes took the boys on a tour of the city during the afternoon.

The visitors paid this compliment to Arkansas—they said that the trunk roads on which they drove through the state were the fastest and finest in the United States.

Fulton and Texas Cars Crash on 67; One Catches Fire

Fred Ogan, 24, Valliant, Okla., Dies Here of Accident Injuries

WOMEN ARE SAVED

Escape From Blazing Texas Car—Mouser Family, Fulton, Hurt

A head-on collision of two automobiles Sunday afternoon on the Hope-Fulton highway, 12 miles west of here, resulted in the death of one person and injuries to eight others.

Fred Ogan, 24, of Valliant, Okla., driver of one of the cars, died early Monday morning in Josephine hospital of internal injuries.

Critically injured, he was brought to the hospital in an unconscious condition. Physicians held only a slim hope for his recovery. Reviving, he remained conscious until a few minutes before his death which occured at 1:45 o'clock Monday morning.

Fifth in 3 Years

With the death Monday of Fred Ogan, 24, of Valliant, Okla., the automobile fatalities on the Hope-Fulton road within three years has climbed to five. Scores have been injured, some seriously.

List of Injured

Other injured and brought to the Josephine hospital are:

H. C. Ogan of Fulton, father of the dead man—broken left knee cap and chest injuries.

Miss Mary Collins, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Collins of Spring Hill and a grand daughter of H. C. Ogan—right leg broken in two places, cuts, bruises, and head injury. Expected to recover.

Carl Mouser of Fulton—slight cuts and bruises, sprained neck.

Others at Texarkana

Others hurt and taken to Texarkana are: Mrs. John Burke, and small son, Raymond, and Miss Mary Harper of Harlingen, Texas.

Mrs. Burke was burned on the leg and cut about the face.

Miss Harper received several broken ribs. Raymond Burke was unhurt.

The Ogan automobile, a sedan, was traveling west toward Fulton. Its occupants say the Texas car approached in a weaving fashion, Mrs. Burke, the driver, apparently having lost control.

The Ogan machine was driven to the edge of the highway and was slowing down when the collision occured, it was said.

At Texarkana Mrs. Burke said she had been forced to drive her car toward the left side of the highway when a car directly in front of her proceeding in the same direction, stopped suddenly.

Texas Car Burns

The crash occurred an instant later. Both machines rolled over into the ditch, the Ogan car landing up side down. The Texas car burst into flames from an explosion of the gasoline tank.

Heroism of Miss Mary Harper in in rescuing her two traveling companions from the burning machine in which they had been riding, prevented the accident assuming more tragic proportions.

Miss Harper lifted the small son of Mrs. Burke to safety. Returning she was unsuccessful in removing Mrs.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Aluminum Code Still Goes Seesawing . . . Fess Furious Over Mrs. Coolidge Altar Rumor . . . Wall Street Makes Bad Guess on Commission Makeup.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The granddaddy of all pending NRA codes is the aluminum code, which is twins.

The so-called "Mellon aluminum trust" presented a code last August. But every time it has seemed to be progressing toward approval, a tiny group of independents in the industry has let out a frightful shriek and demanded that NRA take another good look at anti-monopoly provisions of the recovery act.

The independents have proposed a code of their own. It would prohibit the Aluminum Company of America, which owns all virgin aluminum deposits, from fixing the price on primary aluminum and selling aluminum products for less than that price plus manufacturing costs.

If they can't get that ,the independents say ,they will be driven out of business.

The little fellows have fought the "trust" code to a standstill all these months because they were smart enough to hire Oswald F. Schuette, famous here as a trust buster since his winning first against the "radio trust."

It was Schuette who wangled General Johnson into agreeing to get a report on the "trust" code from the Department of Justice, which is investigating monopoly charges against the industry.

The D. J. report is said to have been critical, but the code just recently was passed on to Johnson through Divisional Administrator Charles E. Adams of U. S. Industrial Alcohol Co., U. S. Industrial Chemical Co., National Carbide Corporation, Pure Carbonic Co., and Air Reduction Co.

The code went to Johnson without the D. J. report, but Schuette got to the White House in time to have the general instructed to study the report before he took any action. Code and report rest on Johnson's desk while he tries to avert the steel strike.

No Wedding Bells

The rumor that Mrs. Calvin Coolidge is going to marry an important person in the Republican party is as thick here as the one about an adjournment of Congress before fall.

But the lucky man won't be Simeon Fess, the 72-year-old, bald, pedagocical senator from Ohio. A rumor from goodness knows where arrived here to that effect and Fess was asked about it.

"Preposterous!" he shouted. "That's an insult to Mrs. Coolidge and to me!"

Wall Street Guesses Wrong

Some of Wall Street's ideas as to composition of the fiveman board President Roosevelt will select to administer the stock market act are greeted here with nothing less than ribald laughter. Roosevelt mentioned them facetiously when he said reassuringly that he hadn't thought about selecting the five.

The "insiders" up there picked on Sidney J. Weinberg and Thomas J. Watsonn as two of the five.

Weinberg is a large factor in the celebrated Goldman Sachs concern, so well remembered by a horde of investors.

Watson is president of the International Business Machines Corporation and an associate of James H. Rand, who fought the stock market bill so hard that he even brought Dr. Wirt into the picture here in his attempt to beat it.

The Justice Department has a suit againt Watson's company and the Remington-Rand firm to declare invalid their alleged monopolistic agreement as to sale of business equipment.

Wall Street is correct, however, in assuming the transfer to the new commission of Federal Trade Commissioners James M. Landis—co-author of the bill—and George C. Mathews.

Another good bet is John M. Hancock of the Lehman Brothers banking firm, a friend of Roosevelt.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Rid Surplus Flesh on Neck With This Exercise

Bathing suits and revealing summer evening gowns are not flattering to the woman who has extra weight between her shoulder blades and across the back of her neck.

First of all, stop eating pastries and other extremely rich desserts and substitute fresh or stewed fruits in their place. After that, make up your mind to do exercises for ten minutes night and morning and be sure to select some that will make you lose weight in the desired spots. Here's one fine exercise for reducing surplus poundage on shoulders and back of the neck:

Kneel on the floor with legs drawn up under your body and head resting on your arms on the floor. Then, flinging the arms outward, raise your body to an upright position with its weight resting on your heels. Keep forcing the arms back, squeezing the shoulder blades together until they start to hurt a little. If you have trouble making your arms stay parallel while they're stretched out behind you, clasp the hands together. Sometimes this makes it easier to really squeeze the flesh between the shoulders. Feel the surplus flesh squirm under the pressure and notice how the lump on the back of the neck disappears. Hold the position a few seconds and then relax and rest a minute before repeating. This exercise should be done ten times night and morning.

It is a good plan to occasionally remore spark plugs from an engine and inspect them carefully for cracked porcelain or other defects.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Your Boy Lazy? Let Him Work For His Supper! A Little Roughage Will Cure Fat, Indolent Child

Fat Arthur lay on the swing munching doughnuts.

His mother called out, "Arthur, stop that stuffing and go and do something."

"Ain't got nothin' to do."

"Well, Jimmy has. He always finds something. He's out there now tinkering with the lawn mower."

"What good 'sat do? He's just fussy. Always worrying folks and gettin' other folks talked at when they don't fuss too. Anyway I'm tired."

His mother began to think. What Arthur said was true. Jimmy did too much. He was nothing but skin and bones yet he couldn't keep still. When there were no duties he went off on a goose chase of his own.

Opposite Cases

Fat lazy Arthur needed more exercise and Jimmy needed less. Arthur needed to eat less and Jimmy needed to eat more. Strange that nature who put high-strung nerves in some people couldn't give them bodies to back their energy. Arthur would always be happiest because he was placid. He never saw anything to do for anybody, let other people worry, and as long as he had food wah content.

Then she saw Mr. James coming down the street. Mr. James was so fat he could hardly walk, but he was a kindly busy gentleman who had a finger in every town-pie, was a leading citizen, and had made money.

"I'll ask him what to do," she thought. So pretty soon she was down at his store and sitting in a big easy chair in his office.

She put her problem to him.

Mr. James chuckled as she talked. "Say, it's funny," he said at last. "I was just thinking about it this morning. I was looking at your fat boy. I look at him every day and he's always taking life easy.

"Well, that's the way I was until Grandma got hold of me. They shipped me out to her farm. The old lady took one look and said, 'Well, my little pin-cushion, here's where you lose about fifty pounds. You work out there with the men. You do your share or you don't eat. Not a bite. Pa will take care of you.'

Solving the Problem

"For about a week I soldiered. And I went hungry. Those people did what they said they would. They sweated me and worked me and starved me. I got thin, actually. At first Iwas miserable, but after while I liked it. When I worked they fed me like a prize pig. When I left to go home for school Granma said, 'Go ahead and be as fat as you like, but remember you can't impose on the world. You've got to work and work hard, if it's only piling up stones and tearing them down again.' Then she gave me twenty dollars for new clothes and a pound cake and put me on the train."

"Thank you," said his vistor fervently. "I have an idea now. There are rugs to beat. No rugs—no supper. But it seems a little cruel."

"Cruel, nothing," chucked Mr. James. "And by the way, send Jimmy over to me. He's too thin. I've got a farm — — —" the lady looked worried "— — — and I'm going to fill him up on milk and I'll put ten pounds on him, I'll guarantee. And he's going to sleep fifteen hours a day if I have to hold him down myself. He's going to learn how to loaf and like it. It won't spoil him."

Fat children are not always lazy, but a bit of roughage won't hurt them as a rule At any rate, "Grandma" had a good idea.

BELTON

The Belton Home Demonstration club met Tuesday afternoon, June 12, at the home of Mrs. J. L. Eley with 10 members and five visitors present. Mrs. S. F. Leslie for the devotional read the 126th Psalm. The meeting was then turned over to Miss Griffin, the home demonstration agent. The demonstration was given on cheese and jelly making. She also showed us how to make a useful fly trap. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. J. W. Siddon on July 10.

Drinking water is so bad as to need boiling in Russia, so tea drinking has become almost universal there. Railway stations have faucets which supply boiling water so that passengers may make their own tea.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

©1934 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL, circus performer, falls from the trapeze and is injured. To please her partner, MADELINE SIDDAL, Donna goes to Madeline's home to recuperate, pretending to be the other girl. She is ashamed of the deception but keeps it up, even when BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, asks her to marry him. Bill and Donna are married.

MRS. PLANTER, housekeeper discharged by Donna, is her enemy.

Madeline who has married CON DAVID, animal trainer, is killed. Con knows of Donna's deception and decides to blackmail her. He comes to the nearby town and Donna meets him secretly. Con threatens to cause trouble for her. Mrs. Planter learns of the meeting and writes Bill an anonymous letter.

Bill goes to see Con and during his absence Grandfather Siddal dies. Bill, believing Donna has committed bigamy, tells her he "knows the truth" and will leave immediately after the funeral. Donna steals away and boards a train for Chicago.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVI

DONNA heard the familiar voice almost before she saw who was speaking. "Well, look who's here! I didn't expect to see you."

She stared into Con David's blurred, bloodshot eyes. For some reason she was not surprised.

Donna's lips were stiff and dry. "You win!" she mumbled.

"Kicked you out, did he?"

"No, I left—before he did."

"That's what I thought he'd do. Tough customer, that husband of yours. But if you'll listen to me you'll forget him and go back where you belong. A farm's no place for a girl like you. Maybe you're out of training now but you'll soon get your stride again."

He took her hat from the seat and sat down beside her. Donna was not conscious of irritation.

"Going to Chi, I suppose?"

"Yes," she agreed.

"So'm I. Decided I'd better go while the going's good. Siddal might get nasty after he thinks over what I said."

"You chose a bad time to leave," Donna said slowly, laboriously. "As long as you came to Lebanon to get Grandfather Siddal's money you should have stayed until his will was read."

"Will! What do you mean?"

"He's dead. He died this morning."

"I'll be damned! So you didn't get to make good your threat?"

"My threat?"

"I mean get him to change his will in favor of you, precious husband?"

"No. He didn't change the will."

"Hm! Then what are you running away for? Even if the boy friend is through with you, so far as he knows you're Madeline Siddal and the property is yours. You can kick him out, you know."

SHE looked at him, not comprehending what he was saying.

"Why don't you divorce him, Donna? I'll marry you and there'll be no need to spill the truth about the fraud. Aside from the money, I'm strong for you. You know that! I don't want to hurt you. I hated like the devil to threaten you, but it's every fellow for himself, you know. And—what's the matter?"

She was staring at him in blank amazement. "He said you told him the truth. It was because of what you said that he was going to leave me. If you didn't tell him I'm not Madeline, in heaven's name what did you tell him that could turn him against me so?"

The man shifted uneasily. "I told him the literal truth and nothing else."

"But if you—how could I get the money you want so badly if Bill knows I'm an impostor?"

"He doesn't know it. I didn't say anything about the masquerade. What I said was the truth and he chose to interpret it in a different way—that's all!"

Donna caught his arm feverishly. "What—what did you tell him?"

"I said that I married Madeline Siddal and showed him the certificate. I rather imagine he believes that you committed bigamy, my dear, when you went through the ceremony with him."

"Oh, my God!" she cried. "No wonder he acted the way he did. What a scoundrel you are, Con David! I didn't know, a man could be so vile! And you knew that I loved him. You knew—! I'm going back to tell him the truth—all of it! He'll kill you for this!"

SHE sprang to her feet, but the lurch of the train flung her back into the chair.

"Wait a minute," Con said quickly. "You can't go back—not for some time, at least. There's no stop for 100 miles, and I wouldn't advise you to jump off the train. Another fall might not prove as fortunate as the last one. They might take you back in a box. Reason this out, Donna. I didn't tell him you were my wife. He jumped to that conclusion himself. Up to that time he thought that he was a deceived husband and I was your lover. That riled! Where would you be if you should go back? What good could it do you? In the first place, you haven't a chance of convincing him you're really his wife. He saw the certificate—"

"But the date—?"

"Evidently he didn't look at it. He saw the names and that was enough. That and the fact that you came running when I called. Probably he's kidding himself that you loved him so much you were willing to commit a crime to marry him. That should set a lot better than believing that I was your lover."

"You'll give me that certificate," Donna said tensely, "and I'll prove to him that you lied."

"Oh, no, my dear. I won't give it to you! That's my most valuable asset at the moment—not only to prove I'm Amos Siddal's heir, but as a trump card to make you do what I want you to."

"And that is—?"

"Keep up the masquerade. Get the farm, divorce the farmer, and marry me."

She laughed scornfully. "I'd starve before I'd do that. And, if it's the last thing I ever do, I'll prevent you from getting what isn't yours."

"I've heard that before. So you're still strong for the husband, even if he did kick you out!"

"I'm so strong for him," she said, "that if he refuses to let me be his wife I'll be his servant. I love him more than anything in the world!"

"You'll get over that. I felt that way about you once but I lived through it."

Fortunately there were no passengers within earshot. The conductor passed through the car and Donna beckoned to him to ask what would be the next stop. He told her and moved on. She picked up her traveling bag and moved to another seat. Con laughed, flipped the pages of his magazine and apparently lost all interest.

DONNA rested her head against the back of the seat and closed her eyes. She was utterly weary. Her temples throbbed and the same dizziness that had made Con David's face a curious blur with grotesque features persisted, even though her heart was lighter.

The motion of the train, the constant chug-chug of the engine and the warmth of the car were soothing. The quivering in her limbs and the sensation of sinking ceased. Donna tried to open her eyes to watch the snow-clad fields as they passed them, but her lids seemed weighted down.

Hours later she sat up with a start. The train was standing still. Lights were blazing and outside the window she could see porters running back and forth with luggage, some pushing trucks loaded with suitcases or trunks.

She jumped up, pushed her hat into place, pulled on her coat and snatched up her traveling bag. This must be the place where she was to leave the train and catch another back to Lebanon.

The car was deserted and that seemed strange. Perhaps Con had stepped out on the platform for a breath of air. Donna ran down the aisle, afraid the train might start before she could get off. A brakeman stood in the little vestibule. He smiled and said, "Getting off here?"

"Yes."

The great dome overhead, the gates beyond and the red caps looked familiar. Suddenly Donna's heart seemed to stop beating. She saw Con walking toward the gate, a porter beside him carrying his luggage.

He looked back at her and waved. "I'll be at the Sherman House for a few days," he said. "Call me up!"

She was in Chicago. She had gone clear through to Chicago and Con David had been on the same train. Donna dropped her traveling bag and stood staring after him, as this new menace threatened her.

At least she could telegraph Bill and beg him to let her return.

Scanning New Books

BY BRUCE CATTON

Someting like 300 years ago, a number of negro slaves brought from Africa to work the plantations of Dutch Guiana revolted and escaped to the jungles of the Surinam river. Here they established themselves in villagesi, fought off every effort of the whites to subdue them, and did so well that they have been completely independent ever since.

Their story is told in "Rebel Destiny," by Melville and Frances Herskovits, and it is rather surprising.

These writers went into the Dutch Guiana jungles to have a look at these transplanted blacks and found a little bit of 17th century Africa existing there—a culture more "African" than anything that could be found in Africa today.

For the African tribesmen have been vastly influenced by white civilization for many generations. Their ways have changed greatly. These folks in Guiana on the other hand, have been almost completely isolated. As a result, their life today is almost precisely the life of the African tribes of three centuries ago.

This book is more along the lines of a serious anthropological treatise than a popular travelog, and its popularity may suffer for that reason; but it is deeply interesting, for all its sober studiousness, and its account of the life lived by this detached tribe in the South American jungles is well worth your while.

Published by Whittlesey House, it sells for $3.

REED HITS SALES

to spoil and people go hungry as a result of inefficient management and delayed investigation, and hundreds of worthy people were denied assitance while political pull procured places for people not in need."

Revenue Department

Mr. Reed's severest criticism was directed at the state Revenue Department:

"I will discharge 100 or more employes from the Revenue Department," he promised, "and eimmediately return the auto tag collections to the sheriffs of the counties who are elected by the people, thereby destroying another division of the great machine, and reducing the cost of collection.

"This department has an annual appropriation of nearly one-half a million dollars which is more than is being spent by the state for the operation, the upkeep and the maintenance of your State Hospital for Nervous Diseases which has more than 3,400 inmates and approximately 300 employes.

"This department spends approximately each pear an amount equal to that spent by the State Teachers College at Conway, the Henderson State Teachers College at Arkadelphia, the state colleges at Monticello, Magnolia, Jonesboro and Russellville combined.

"This is the greatest political machine ever created in this state and should be disbanded immediately, as it apparently was created to pay political debts and control state politics.

"For several months while I was in the service of the government in the collecting of the revenue, 43 employes were used by your national government in our state. In a list of employes filed with the Senate, it was reflected that there were 218 employes in the state department. Legislation passed since that time provided for 11 more and in addition to the above, there is a lump sum of $25,000 for secret service help which should employ a sufficient number to make approximately 250 in this department. These figures vary as money is available and politics demand.

"The cost is to high for the amount collected. This is an average of more than three employes, office and field, for each county in the state. This is more than the taxpayers can support, and is a ruthless political waste of funds. You were told by your governor two years ago that you would go back to 1911 to 1913 and now we find more employes in one department than the entire administrative state government used then."

Penal System Operation

Mr. Reed's policy in the operation of the penal system, he said, includes control by a board and employes "learned in the science of agriculture and the control of prisoners;" production of all the food necessary on the farms; discontinuance of Christmas furloughs for "dangerous criminals," and discontinuance of "shooting unarmed prisoners above the hip when they attempt to escape."

"This institution," he concluded, "needs a thorough and complete change. More men have died violent deaths at the hands of other prisoners serving as guards upon the penitentiary farms during the last year than had occurred over a period of many years. Prisoners with a lust to kill should never be entrusted with firearms as guards."

Opposed to Sales Tax

Discussing school problems, Mr. Reed said:

"I shall support the Arkansas schools from kindergarten to the university in any equitable movement for their relief, except a sales tax and a direct tax upon property. I shall never agree to lower the standards of higher education but will always be ready to assist in raising the standards of education from the bottom.

"I believe in longer terms, more money and thoroughly understand that a capable teacher cannot live on a six-month term at $4 0a month. The present conditions are a disgrace, and the 450,000 pupils, 12,00 0teachers and many thousand parents have been betrayed. Thousands of school doors would have closed had it not been for our president, and no concern expressed over the situation by the governor except at election time."

Fire Damages Allen Home 2nd and Hervey

Fire early Sunday morning damaged the home of Ray Allen, Second and Hervey streets. The blaze, apparently starting from the inside, was breaking through the roof when firemen arrived. It was extinguished without further damage.

No one was in the house at the time of the fire, Mr. and Mrs. Allen being out of the city.

Mr. Allen is employed at the Saenger theater as a motion picture projector.

Faith of Rahab Is Theme of Revival

Rev. Chester Estes Opens Series at Church of Christ

Services are being conducted by Evangelist Chester Estes of Winfield, Ala., at 7:45 each night at the Church of Christ. Sunday night he spoke on "The Faith of Rahab." He stated that the story of her deliverance was an illustration of saving faith.

He described saving faith as a working faith, John 6:28-29, a faith made perfect by works, a faith counted by righteousness. It was explained that Rahab was justified by works, James 2:25; also by faith, Hebrews 11:31.

"There are three kinds of works spoken of in the Bible, viz. works of the law, of man's righteousness, of God's righteousness. She was not justified by any devisings of her own, nor by the law, but by the doings of the things that she was commanded to do. When one hears the gospel today and obeys it he is justified as she was by doing what God commands. There is no record of anyone's being blessed because of his faith, until that faith manifested itself in doing what God had commanded.

"We must do just what God commands, even when it seems foolish to men, when there is no reason for doing the thing exacted other than because God commanded, when the command is apparently illogical, when the command is apparently morally wrong."

He gave as examples in addition to the deliverance of Rahab, the offering of Issac, when from a moral point of view it was wrong to kill. "Those that are baptised obey God when there is no reason, from man's point of view, why he should be baptised, when there is no connection between it and the remission of sins, and when men say it is plain foolishness." He stated that from man's point of view baptism is the most foolish thing that we have ever been called upon to do, and that that is no reason that God has commanded us to be baptised. God wants the world, the church and heaven to know that man has the faith that Abraham or Rahab had before he an get into the church.

"We are not walking by reason of sight, but by faith. The one who obeys the bospel does something not found in the works of the law or in the works of man's righteousness (because man wants to take baptism out of the Bible). Therefore, he is working the works of God's righteousness when he obeys the gospel. There is no such thing as believing in God and refusing to do what God says."

Hope Single Game From League Lead

Storks Make It 3 Straight, Beating Atlanta 11 to 8

The Storks were only one game from top position in the Two States league Monday by virtue of their 11 to 8 triumph Sunday afternoon over Atlanta here.

It was the third straight victory for the locals during the week, and "Blackie" Elliott's second win in two days, having twirled the Storks to a 7 to 2 victory over Texarkana Firemen here Friday.

Riley, Hope first baseman, continued his heavy hitting, smashing a homer over the right field fence. The collection plate was passed. The hitting of Wells, who obtained four out of five, wa sonther feature of the contest.

Velvin, starting Hope pitcher, was wild and ineffective. He was knocked out of the box in the first inning after allowing three runs. Elliott went to his rescue and hurled the remaining innings.

Atlanta used two pitchers, Mays being removed in the early innings. Taylor finished for him.

The Transporters beat the Firemen at Texarkana, 16 to 15, in the other Two States league game.

Burke. She ran to a group of negroes nearby and obtained their assistance in removing the injured woman.

One of Mrs. Burke's legs was severely burned and her hair had been singed by the flames.

The negroes aided occupants of the Ogan car, some of whom were pinned inside when the car came to a halt upside down.

Passing motorists carried the Texans to a hospital in Texarkana. Some of the occupants of the Ogan car were brought to Josephine hospital in a Hope Furniture Company ambulance.

The Ogan car was enroute to Fulton after a trip to Hope, and Mrs. Burke was driving to Tennessee.

Ogan Funeral Tuesday

Funeral services for young Ogan were tentatively set for Tuesday afternoon at Fulton.

At Valliant, Okla., Mr. Ogan was associated with his brother W. B. Ogan, in the filling station business. He had driven to Fulton to visit his father and other relatives. He had planned to return to Valliant this week with his father.

The accident Sunday was the second death in the Ogan family within the past two months. The victim's mother, Mrs. H. C. Ogan, having died in April, however, her death was not accidental.

Surviving are his father, H. C. Ogan, one brother, W. B. Ogan of Valliant, Okla., two sisters, Mrs. Carl Mouser of Fulton and Mrs. Joe Collins of Spring Hill.

By the Associated Press

With the death of Fred Ogan of Valliant, Okla., at Hope Monday, the accident death list in Arkansas was brought to seven over the week end.

The body of Mattie Callahan, who was drowned while swimming in the river near Conway Sunday, was recovered Monday.

Three other were drowned at the same time when the wind swept the log to which they were holding into the swift current.

Ten persons were injured in various accidents over the state during the week-end.

PWA Has Spent 20 Million a Week

U. S. Construction Program Completes Its First Year

WASHINGTON.—Citing a $20,000,000 weekly expenditure since March 1 and 4,000 projects completed, the Public Works Administration started on its second year Sunday with a high pace reflecting increasing employment expenditure and construction contract figures. Approximately $1,600,000,000 of PWA construction is contracted or already begun by day labor and $170,000,000 worth of construction work is being advertised for bids, the report says.

Roughly, $1,200,000 of PWA funds flowed from the Treasury and frequently the money does not pass out of the Treasury until the project is completed.

Senate Gives Long Clear Vindication

"Kingfish" and Overton Win Out in Louisiana Contest

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The fight of the anti-Long political faction in Louisiana to have Huey P. Long and John H. Overton ousted from the senate ended Saturday with the senate voting to end all further inquiry into charges that Overton, with the support of Long, was elected fraudulently.

A resolution submitted by Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, chairman of the elections committee, saying that petitioners seeking the ousters had failed to bring evidence to justify continuance of the investigation, was adopted without debate.

Rumors that Long would be a candidate for another term as governor through which his opponents say he hopes to "recoup" his political organization, brought no comment from him.

Photographers urging him to pose for a picture with his railroad ticket in his hand were told:

"No, I don't want any picture taken, I don't need any more publicity, because I'm not coming back."

The senate's adoption of the elections committee resolution ended more than two years of effort of Louisiana petitioners to have Long ousted. Subsequently charges were brought against both him and Overton.

Skelly, Burlesque Star, Is Killed

He Produced Play in Which Arkansas Writer "Crashed" Broadway

TORRINGTON, Ct.,—Hal Skelley, versatile character actor and sportsman aviator, was killed late Sunday when the light station wagon in which he was riding with a young woman was struck by a New Haven railroad train on a grade crossing at Canaan, about 20 miles from here.

The state and screen star's companion, Nellie Bell, a domestic at the home of Maj. M. K. Lee, West Cornwall, was injured critically. She was taken to a hospital here by Dr. Walker Bradford of Cornwall. Little hope is held for her life.

Skelly was regarded as one of the most talented comedians of the present day stage and screen. He rose to the pinnacle of his success in his portrayal of Skid, the burlesque hoofer, in "The Dance of Life."

"Burlesque" gave Skelly his entree to Hollywood after his interpretation of Skid was hailed by critics as a characterization as indivdiual of Joseph Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" and William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes."

Skelly stepped at once into a permanent place in filmdom's hall of fame. Then, in 1931, he rushed off to England for an engagement in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," later returning to make more movies, some of which he directed.

Last month the actor entered the producing field, his first presentation being "Come What May" in which he shared stellar roles with Mary Phillips, the play being written by a son of Chester Flournoy, veterans newspaper man of Pine Bluff, Ark.

confession gthat our self-governin democracy in its local aspects has broken down.

It is a libel that every decent citizen furiously denies.

In the present instance it will behoove Louisiana's "better citizens" to go home and go to work. If they can't beat their "monster" Huey P. Long in Louisiana they only defame their fair state by crying about election conditions to the United States Senate.

It is advisable to use new gaskets when installing new spark pulgs and and also to make certain that the plug is screwed down tightly with a wrench. After the plugs have been installed and used for a short time they should be tightened still further to avoid compression leakage.

OLD FOLKS LIKE THIS LAXATIVE

Tired, slow-functioning, eliminative organs need the "full" action, prompt, easy movement given by Feen-a-mint, the delightful-tasting chewing gum laxative that contains a laxative ingredient regularly prescribed by physicians. Old folks especially need modern Feen-a-mint, because, by chewing, the laxative is distributed uniformly into the system and thus does not shock, irritate, nor strain. Prompt, thorough-acting Feen-a-mint, while pleasant to take, contains no richness to upset your stomach or diet. Work-hardened old folks like Feen-a-mint because its more modern action eliminates any necessity of experiencing that delay that starts poisons seeping into the system. "Delay" is dangerous—chew Feen-a-mint for constipation. 15c and 25c at druggists everywhere.

HERE'S ONE REASON why long distance calls are fast

WITHIN its own boundaries, this company, like each of the 24 Bell System associated companies, operates its own long distance system. But A. T. & T. trunk lines (shown on map) link these 24 separate systems into a nation-wide unit, over which skilled operators can send your voice almost with the speed of a local call to the remote reaches of the country.

Such nation-wide service would be virtually impossible without equipment built to the same designs and used in the same way . . . without operators trained in the same methods . . . without, in short, a nation-wide organization behind it.

How effectively A. T. & T. meets this need is shown by the fact that today 9 out of 10 long distance calls go through while you hold the line; by the constant pushing back of the frontiers of the voice until 92 per cent of the world's telephones are now within your reach; by four reductions in long distance rates, made voluntarily in recent years.

Here you may see the workings of a fundamental Bell System policy, adopted because we believe it to be a policy that works. In an organization planned like the telephone service for the long pull, we feel that what is best for the telephone user becomes in the end the course that will bring us the sounder, more certain success.
